BENEFITS OF COMPLETE STREETS

- People who live in neighborhoods with sidewalks on roads are 47% more likely to be active at least 30 minutes per day.
- Increased physical activity promotes better grades, school attendance, and classroom behavior.
- Pedestrian street activity increases support of local businesses, expands employment opportunities, and promotes reinvestment into the local economy.
- If 100,000 car trips were replaced by bike trips once a month, it would cut carbon dioxide (CO₂) emissions by 3,764 tons/year.
- Every $1 communities invest in transit generates $5 in economic returns.
- $9,700 is the average annual savings from choosing to ride transit instead of driving alone.
- Homes with higher Walk Scores sell for between $4,000 and $34,000 more.
- Increased pedestrian street activity acts as self-policing, deterring criminal behavior.
